Walking the path to change

Study Experiences can prepare health-care professionals for the 21st century where global health concerns are becoming more prominent

(Tuckett & Crompton, 2014)

Nurturing opportunities for midwives to broaden their appreciation of global midwifery practices should be actively promoted

(Egenes, 2012)

Navigating the Political Landscape

Those involved with curriculum development within Universities need to appreciate the importance of internationalization of midwifery, nursing and other applied health discipline programs, ensuring that students have the opportunity and are well equipped to practice in diverse multicultural and global health systems

(Tuckett & Crompton, 2014 & 2016)

Participation in global health outreach projects and international health electives has significant potential to offer future health professionals the opportunity to learn about and address the health advocate role, foster global citizenship and develop a sense of social responsibility to tackle worldwide disparities and inequities in health and social development

(Dharamsi, Osei-Twum & Whiteman, 2011)

Community Engagement

The lived experience

IF YOU WANT TO GO FAST,
GO ALONE.
IF YOU WANT TO GO FAR,
GO TOGETHER.
