GLOBAL YOUTH DEVELOPMENT INDEX

The potential for young people to contribute to a happy, healthy and prosperous future is threatened by widespread joblessness, unequal access to health and education and lack of political influence. This is the conclusion of the Global Youth Development Index, an initiative of the Commonwealth Secretariat, which ranked 183 countries according to 18 indicators covering employment, education, literacy, health, and civic and political engagement. The first-ever Global Youth Development Index shows that:

- The top ten countries, with the exception of Australia and Japan, are from Europe. The ten lowest-ranked countries are all from Sub-Saharan Africa, however the region also recorded the largest improvement in the last five years.
- Young people are twice as likely as adults to be jobless.
- Young women are much less likely to enjoy access to education, health services, financial services and digital technology than young men.
- Participation in formal politics is declining, underscoring growing frustration amid unmet aspirations, although digital activism, protests and volunteering are growing.
- Young people suffer disproportionately as victims of violent crime. However, young people also play an active role in peace-building.

The top ten Commonwealth member countries are: Australia (3), United Kingdom (4), New Zealand (11), Canada (14), Malta (20), Barbados (28), Brunei (31), Sri Lanka (31), Malaysia (34) and Cyprus (38) (http://bit.ly/2eVeKQB).
